

Supporting Students in Shifting Their Self-Concepts

As a teacher, have you experienced an aha moment when a student's self-concept shifted? Did you experience that yourself as a student? What happened?

What were the key factors (such as relationship dynamics or questions that were asked) that contributed to that shift occurring?

How might you replicate those factors for your students to experience those types of shifts?