

Compare Your Notes

Chapter 6

In a collaborative team or with a colleague, complete the following tasks.

1. You've drafted what you believe to be the key components of the instructional practice. Talk to two or three trusted colleagues and ask their thoughts about your draft—do they think you've captured the key elements of practice?
2. Do you feel you have too many key components? If so, you might need to narrow the scope of your instructional framework. Perhaps one of your key components should become the starting point for a separate framework.
3. Check your key components. Have you avoided a list of steps? Are the components really check-list items suffering from observability bias? Are the components too abstract? Revise as necessary.
