

“Rain, Rain, Go Away” Sequencing Strips

The Sakkaros move in next door to the Wrights and the Wrights often talk about their neighbors’ strange habits.

Mrs. Sakkaro won’t let her son play outside with the Wright boy because she is afraid it will rain.

When Mrs. Wright visits the Sakkaros’ home, she is surprised that the house is so clean and immaculate. Mrs. Sakkaro doesn’t even allow water to touch the sink when she gets a drink for Mrs. Wright.

At Murphy’s Park, the Sakkaros eat nothing but cotton candy and M&Ms. Mrs. Wright offers Mrs. Sakkaro an orange drink but she refuses.

The Sakkaros are unusually concerned about weather conditions. They listen to the radio on their way home from the park.

Once the Sakkaros get out of the car from the park, they get very nervous and run quickly to their house.

Unfortunately, the Sakkaros get wet and begin to melt and the Wrights finally discover the mystery of the Sakkaros—they are made of sugar.
