Previewing an Asynchronous Conversation

Title of Presentation:

While previewing this asynchronous conversation, track your thinking on this handout. Remember that good participants in digital conversations are always asking questions, making connections, forming opinions, and gathering facts. Be sure to note specific places where you'd like to add comments or respond to other viewers. Consider starting your comments with phrases like: I notice, I wonder, I realized, You can relate this to, Although it seems, This reminds me of, I'm not sure that, and If I were _____, I would _____.

Thread Title:

Content Description
What key points are expressed in the content of this thread? In the comments added by your peers?

Your Initial Thoughts
What ideas do you agree with here? Disagree with? What new directions would you like to take this conversation in?

Possible Comments
Write a draft of a potential comment here. Remember to use the computer to polish any text comments that you add to our conversation.

Questions for Reflection

1. Do you agree with the general direction that this conversation is heading in? Why or why not? What key points are being left out that you intend to bring to the digital table?

2. What connections can you make between this conversation and content that you've studied in other places and at other times? How can you integrate those connections into this conversation?

3. Which strand of conversation is the most motivating to you? Why? When will you return to see how that strand of conversation is developing?